

Penthouse sweet

Jacques Garcia makes his high rise debut in our round-up of New York City residential developments

New York City's latest crop of luxury residential developments

ARCHITECTURE / 26 JAN 2018

d'Orsay

26 January 2018

This new development, at the point where the West Village, the Meatpacking District and Chelsea meet, is the first foray into the New York residential market by French designer Jacques Garcia. Entitled d'Orsay, the project was approached as a boutique hotel and incorporates French influences.

d'Orsay

26 January 2018

Garcia will work on d'Orsay's interiors, while Hill West Architects are appointed to design the overall architecture of the European-inspired building. The structure, which was developed by Adellco Corporation, spans 11 storeys and consists of 21 residences.

d'Orsay

26 January 2018

The residences will range from one to four bedroom apartments, a penthouse and a separate townhouse. Most units have private outdoor space, while all of them can take full advantage of the wide variety of high-end amenities available.

d'Orsay

26 January 2018

Residents' amenities include a rooftop garden, a fitness centre flooded in natural light, a spa with a treatment room, a steam room, and a striking plunge pool.

QUINN